Bio:

Ed Hall is a macro photographer based in Leeds, West Yorkshire. He's currently working on the digital preservation of insect specimens using high resolution, high magnification imaging. This work went into creating an exhibition at Leeds Museum in 2021. Ed has also been awarded a Churchill Trust Fellowship to continue to explore this work and apply it to the important natural history collections we have in the UK. In exploring new methods for macro photography he hopes to provide new perspectives, and produce impactful photography to engage people with the natural world.
